I have been playing this game since the very beginning - in the 90's. I remember when the Shark was a beta and admin only ship. Used to be 1000's of players back in the day. The game is very simple but fun. I have 1000's of hours in this game and I am pretty sure that's the most I have on a single game. Why, you ask. Because it's that damn good. Do yourself a favor and play it. What is there to lose? It's free to play, simple controls, and a very easy learning curve. I am so glad this game came to steam and I hope the numbers pick back up to revive it to its core. You should start off in Trench Wars zone until you learn a bit of the ships then go to other zones to learn different stuff as well.. i've played this game a ton. its sooooo good. back in the day on station.com they had a few games LIKE this game, but they were just clones. if you've ever played space pirates and zombies, you'll be familiar with the way it plays. the community is amazing, friendly, and positive. all of them! literally ALLLL OF THEM. its friggin NICE. people have been playing this a long time, and will be nice to you too. no lies. try it. just. try it. you wont be dissapointed if you like shooters in space. the community is the best friggin part. seriously. its like being on swg back in the day. everyone is friggin nice. now listen. you're gonna get killed. aLOT. dont let it bother you, go in with a fun mentality, and everyone will befriend you quickly and you'll have guys willing to teach you and help you grow in game. easy to learn, hard to master. this is space combat at its best: old school, friendly, and chill..
